PREFACE.

T^{HE} writing of Characters was a Kind of Wit much in Fashion in the Beginning of the last Century. The two principal Authors in this Way were Sir Thomas Overbury, and Dr. John Earle Tutor to Prince Charles in 1643, and after the Restoration Dean of Westminster, and successively Bishop of Worcester and Salisbury. How agreeable these Sorts of Essays were to the public Taste may be judged from Sir Thomas's little Book having fourteen Editions before 1632, and the Bishop's six between 1628 and 1633. Whether Butler has equalled or excelled them, and what Place he is to hold in this Class of Writers must be left to the Decision of the Public, as the Interest and Prejudice of a Publisher may render me a suspected or an incompetent Judge. The Reader will have an Opportunity of determining for himself, as they have all attempted to draw the same Pictures.

As in such a Variety of Characters there must be some drawn from Originals in general the same, and only differenced by particular Circumstances, the same Observations are sometimes repeated. Whether the Author in this Case requires any Apology must be left to his Judges the Critics ; it is enough for me that I can say I have done him Justice in publishing them.

As most of these Characters are dated when they were composed, I can inform the curious, that they were chiefly drawn up from 1667 to 1669, at which time, as has been before observed, Butler resided in Wales under the Protection of Lord Carbery.

A HUFFING COURTIER

I²s a Cypher, that has no Value himself, but from the Place he ftands in. All his Hap-pinefs confifts in the Opinion he believes others have of it. This is his Faith, but as it is heretical and erroneous, though he fuffer much Tribulation for it, he continues obftinate, and not to be convinced. He flutters up and down like a Butterfly in a Garden ; and while he is pruning of his Peruque takes Occafion to contemplate his Legs, and the Symmetry of his Britches. He is part of the Furniture of the Rooms, and ferves for a walking Picture, a moving Piece of Arras. His Bufinefs is only to be feen, and he performs it with admirable Industry, placing himfelf always in the beft Light, looking wonderfully Politic, and cautious whom he mixes withal. His Occupation is to fhow his Cloaths, and if they could but walk themfelves, they would fave him the Labour, and do his Work as well as himfelf. His Immunity from Varlets is his Freehold, and he were a loft Man without it. His Cloaths are but his Taylor's Livery, which he gives him, for 'tis ten to one he never pays for them. He is very careful to difcover the Lining of his Coat, that you may not fufpect any Want of Integrity or Flaw in him from the Skin outwards. His Taylor is his Creator, and makes him of nothing ; and though he lives by Faith in him, he is perpetually committing Iniquities againft him. His Soul dwells in the Outfide of him, like that of a hollow Tree ; and if you do but pill the Bark off him he deceases immediately. His Carriage of himself is the wearing of his Cloaths, and, like the Cinamon Tree, his Bark is better than his Body. His looking big is rather a Tumor, than Greatness. He is an Idol, that has just so much Value, as other Men give him that believe in him, but none of his own. He makes him Ignorance pass for Reserve, and, like a Hunting-nag, leaps over what he cannot get through. He has just so much of Politics, as Hostlers in the University have Latin. He is as humble as a Jesuit to his Superior ; but repays himself again in Insolence over those, that are below him ; and with a generous Scorn despises those, that can neither do him good, nor hurt. He adores those, that may do him good, though he knows they never will ; and despises those, that would not hurt him, if they could. The Court is his Church, and he believes as that believes, and cries up and down every Thing, as he finds it pass there. It is a great Comfort to him to think, that some who do not know him may perhaps take him for a Lord ; and while that Thought lasts he looks bigger than usual, and forgets his Acquaintance ; and that's the Reason why he will sometimes know you, and sometimes not. Nothing but want of Money or Credit puts him in mind that he is mortal ; but then he trusts Providence that somebody will trust him ; and in Expectation of that hopes for a better Life, and that his Debts will never rise up in Judgment against him. To get in debt is to labour in his Vocation ; but to pay is to forfeit his Protection ; for what's that worth to one that owes Nothing ? His Employment being only to wear his Cloaths, the whole Account of his Life and Actions is recorded in Shopkeepers Books, that are his faithful Historiographers to their own Posterity ; and he believes he loses so much Reputation, as he pays off his Debts ; and that no Man wears his Cloaths in Fashion, that pays for them, for noting is further from the Mode. He believes that he that runs in Debt is beforehand with those that trust him, and only those, that pay, are behind. His Brains are turned giddy, like one that walks on the Top of a House ; and that's the Reason it is so troublesome to him to look downwards. He is a Kind of Spectrum, and his Cloaths are the Shape he takes to appear and walk in ; and when he puts them off he vanishes. He runs as busily out of one Room into another, as a great Practiser does in Westminster-Hall from one Court to another. When he accosts a Lady he puts both Ends of his Microcosm in Motion, by making Legs at one End, and combing his Peruke at the other. His Garniture is the Sauce to his Cloaths, and he walks in his Portcannons like one, that stalks in long Gowns. Every Motion of him cries Vanity of Vanities, all is Vanity, quoth the Preacher. He rides himself like a well-managed Horse, reins in his Neck, and walks Terra Terra. He carries his elbows backward, as if he were pinioned like a trust-up Fowl, and moves as stiff as if he was upon the Spit. His Legs are stuck in his great voluminous Britches, like the Whistles in a Bagpipe, those abundant Britches, in which his nether Parts are not clothed, but packed up. His Hat has been long in a Consumption of the Fashion, and is now almost worn to Nothing ; if it do not recover quickly it will grow too little for a Head of Garlick. He wears Garniture on the Toes of his Shoes to justify his Pretensions to the Gout, or such other Malady, that for the Time being is moft in Fashion or Requeft. When he falutes a Friend he pulls off his Hat, as Women do their Vizard-Mafques. His Ribbons are of the true Complexion of his Mind, a Kind of painted Cloud or gawdy Rainbow, that has no Colour of it felf, but what is borrows from Reflection. He is as tender of his Cloaths, as a Coward is of his Flefh, and as loth to have them difordered. His Bravery is all his Happinefs ; and like Atlas he carries his Heaven on his Back. He is like the golden Fleece, a fine Outfide on a Sheep's Back. He is a Monfter or an Indian Creature, that is good for nothing in the World but to be feen. He puts himfelf up into a Sedan, like a Fiddle in a Cafe, and is taken out again for the Ladies to play upon, who when they have done with him, let down his treble-String, till they are in the Humour again. His Cook and Valet de Chambre confpire to drefs Dinner and him fo punctually together, that the one may not be ready before the other. As Peacocks and Oftridges have the gaudieft and fineft Feathers, yet cannot fly ; fo all his Bravery is to flutter only. The Beggars call him my Lord, and he takes them at their Words, and pays them for it. If you praife him, he is fo true and faithful to the Mode, that he never fails to make you a Prefent of himfelf, and will not be refufed, tho' you know not what to do with him when you have him.

AN ANTIQUARY

I²s one that has his Being in this Age, but his Life and Conversation is in the Days of old. He despises the present Age as an Innovation, and flights the future ; but has a great Value for that, which is past and gone, like the Madman, that fell in Love with Cleopatra. He is an old frippery-Philosopher, that has so strange a natural Affection to worm-eaten Speculation, that it is apparent he has a Worm in his Skull. He honours his Forefathers and Fore-mothers, but condemns his Parents as too modern, and no better than Upstarts. He neglects himself, because he was born in his own Time, and so far off Antiquity, which he so much admires ; and repines, like a younger Brother, because he came so late into the World. He spends the one half of his Time in collecting old insignificant Trifles, and the other in shewing them, which he takes singular Delight in ; because the oftener he does it, the further they are from being new to him. All his Curiousities take place of one another according to their Seniority, and he values them not by their Abilities, but their Standing. He has a great Veneration for Words that are stricken in Years, and are grown so aged, that they have out-lived their Employments—These he uses with a Respect agreeable to their Antiquity, and the good Services they have done. He throws away his Time in enquiring after that which is past and gone so many Ages since, like one that shoots away an Arrow, to find out another that was lost before. He fetches things out of Dust and Ruins, like the Fable of the chymical Plant raised out of its own Afhes. He values one old Invention, that is loft and never to be recovered, before all the new ones in the World, tho' never so useful.

 The whole Buſineſs of his Life is the ſame with his, that flows the Tombs at Westminster, only the one does it for his Pleaſure, and the other for Money. As every Man has but one Father, but two Grand-Fathers and a World of Anceſtors ; ſo he has a proportional Value for Things that are antient, and the further off the greater.

He is a great Time-ſerver, but it is of Time out of Mind, to which he conforms exactly, but is wholly retied from the preſent. His Days were ſpent and gone long before he came into the World, and ſince his only Buſineſs is to collect what he can out of the Ruins of them. He has ſo ſtrong a natural Affection to any Thing that is old, that he may truly ſay to Duſt and Worms you are my Father, and to Rottenneſs thou are my Mother. He has no Providence nor Fore-ſight ; for all his Contempla-tions look backward upon the Days of old, and his Brains are turned with them, as if he walked backwards. He had rather interpret one obſcure Word in any old ſenſeleſs Difcourſe, than be the Author of the moſt ingenious new one ; and with Scaliger would fell the Empire of *Germany*¹ (if it were in his Power) for an old Song. He devours an old Manu-ſcript with greater Reliſh than Worms and Moths do, and, though there be nothing in it, values it above any Thing printed, which he accounts but a Novelty. When he happens to cure a small Botch in an old Author, he is as proud of it, as if he had got the Philosophers Stone, and could cure all the Diseases of Mankind. He values things wrongfully upon their Antiquity, forgetting that the most modern are really the most ancient of all Things in the World, like those that reckon their Pounds before their Shillings and Pence, of which they are made up. He esteems no Customs but such as have outlived themselves, and are long since out of Use ; as the Catholics allow of no Saints, but such as are dead, and the Fanatics, Opposition, of none but the Living.

A PROUD MAN

IS a Fool in Fermentation, that swells and boils over like a Porridge-Pot. He sets out his Feathers like an Owl, to swell and seem bigger than he is. He is troubled with a Tumour and Inflammation of Self-Conceit, that renders every Part of him stiff and uneasy. He has given himself Sympathetic Love-Powder, that works upon him to Dotage, and has transformed him into his own Mistris. He is his own Gallant, and makes most passionate Addresses to his own dear Perfections. He commits Idolatry to himself, and worships his own Image ; though there is no Soul living of his Church but himself, yet he believes as the Church believes, and maintains his Faith with the Obstinacy of a Fanatic. He is his own Favourite, and advance himself not only above his Merit, but all Mankind ; is both Damon and Pythias to his own dear self, and values his Crony above his Soul. He gives Place to no Man but himself, and that with very great Distance to all others, whom he esteems not worthy to approach him. He believes whatsoever he has receives a Value in being his ; as a Horse in a Nobleman's Stable will bear a greater Price than in a common Market. He is so proud, that he is as hard to be acquainted with himself as with others ; for he is very apt to forget who he is, and knows himself only superficially ; therefore he treats himself civilly as a stranger with Ceremony and Compliment, but admits of no Privacy. He strives to look bigger than himself, as well as others, and is no better than his own Parasite and Flatterer. A little Flood will make a shallow Torrent swell above its Banks, and rage, and foam, and yield a roaring Noise, while a deep silent Stream glides quietly on. So a vain-glorious insolent proud Man swells with a little frail Prosperity, grows big and loud, and overflows his Bounds, and when he sinks, leaves Mud and Dirt behind him. His Carriage is as glorious and haughty, as if he were advanced upon Men's Shoulders, or tumbled over their Heads like Knipperdolling. He fancies/himself a Colosse, and so he is, for his Head holds no Proportion to his Body, and his foundation is lesser than his upper Stories. We can naturally take no view of our selves, unless we look downwards, to teach us how humble Admirers we ought to be of our own Values. The lighter and less solid his Materials are, the more Room they take up, and make him swell the bigger ; as Feathers and Cotton will stuff Cushions better than Things of more close and solid Parts.

A #FIFTH-MONARCHY-MAN

I²S one, that is not contented to be a Privy-Counsellor of the Kingdom of Heaven, but would fain be a Minifter of State of this World, and tranflate the Kingdom of Heaven to the Kingdom of Earth. His Defign is to make Chrift King, as his Forefathers the Jew did, only to abufe and crucify him, that he might fhare his Lands and Goods, as he did his Vicegerents here. He dreams of a Fool's Paradife without a Serpent in it, a golden Age all of Saints, and no Hypocrites, all holy-Court Princes, and no Subjects but the Wicked ; a Government of Perkin Warbec and Lambert Simnel Saints, where every Man, that had a Mind to it, might make himfelf a Price, and claim a Title to the Crown. He fancies a fifth-Monarchy as the Quinteffence of all Governments, abftracted from all Matter, and confifting wholly of Revelations, Vifions, and Myfteries. John of Leyden was the firft Founder of it, and though he mifcarried, like Romulus in a Tempeft, his Pofterity have Revelations every full Moon, that there may be a Time to fet up his Title again, and with better Succefs ; though his Brethren, that have attempted to fince, had no fooner quartered his Coat with their own, but their whole outward Men were fet on the Gates of the City ; where a Head and four Quarters ftand as Types and Figures of the fifth-Monarchy. They have been contriving (fince Experiments, that coft Necks are too chargeable) to try it in little, and have depofed King Oberon, to erect their Monarchy in Fairy-Land, as being the moſt proper and natural Region in the whole World for their Government, and if it ſucceed there to proceed further. The Devil's Proſpect of all the Kingdoms of the Earth, and the Glory of them, has ſo dazzled their Eyes, that they would venture their Necks to take him at his Word, and give him his Price. Nothing comes ſo near the Kingdom of Darkneſs as the fifth-Monarchy, that is no where to be found, but in dark Propheſies, obſcure Mythologies, and myſtical Riddles, like the Viſions Aeneas ſaw in Hell of the Roman Empire.

Next this it moſt reſembles Mahomet's Coming to the Turks, and King Arthur's Reign over the Britons in Merlin's Propheſies ; ſo near of Kin are all fantaſtic Illuſions, that you may diſcern the ſame Lineaments in them all. The poor Wicked are like to have a very ill time under them, for they are reſolved upon arbitrary Government, according to their ancient and fundamental Revelations, and to have no Subjects but Slaves, who between them and the Devil are like to ſuffer Perſecution enough to make them as able Saints, as their Lords and Maſters. He gathers Churches on the Sunday, as the Jews did Sticks on their Sabbath, to ſet the State on Fire. He humms and haſs high Treason, and calls upon it, as Gameſters do on the Caſt they would throw. He groans Sedition, and, like the Phariſee, rails, when he gives Thanks. He interprets Propheſies, as Whittington did the Bells, to ſpeak to him, and governs himſelf accordingly.

[I]s one, that would fain make himself that, []which {i} Nature{i} never meant him; like a {i}Fannatic,{i} that insspires himsself with his own Whimsses. He ssets up Haberdassher of ssmall Poetry, with a very ssmall Stock, and no Credit. He believes it is Inventions enough to find out other Men's Wit; and whatsoever he lights upon either in Books, or Company, he makes bold with as his own. This he puts together sso un- towardly, that you may perceive his own Wit has the Rickets, by the Sswelling Dissproportion of the Joints. Imitation is the whole Sum of him; him; and his Vein is but an Itch or Clap, that he has catched of others; and his Flame like that of Charcoals that were burnt before : But as he wants Judgment to undersstand what is besst, he naturally takes the worsst, as being mosst agreeable to his own Talent. You may 108 A SMALL POET. know his Wit not to be natural, 'tis sso un- quiet and troublesome in him: For as thosse, that have Money but sseldom, are always sshak- ing their Pockets, when they have it; sso does he, when he thinks he has got ssomething, that will make him appear. He is a perpetual Tal- ker; and you may know by the Freedom of his Disscourse, that he came light by it, as Thieves sspend fiercely what they get. He meassures other Men's Wits by {i}their{i} Modesty, and his own by {i}his{i} Confidence. He makes nothing of writing Plays, because he has not Wit enough to un- derstand the Difficulty. This makes him ven- ture to talk and sscribble, as Chowsses do to play with cunning Gamessters, until they are cheated and laughed at. He is always talking of Wit, as thosse, that have bad Voices, are always ssing- ing out of Tune; and thosse, that cannot play, delight to fumble on Insstruments. He grows the unwisser by other Men's Harms; for the worsse others write, he finds the more Encou- ragement to do sso too. His Greedinesss of Praise is sso eager, that he sswallows any Thing, that comes in the Likenesss of it, how notorious and palpable ssoever, and is as Shot-free againsst any Thing, that may lessssen his good Opinion of himself—This renders him incurable, like Disseasses, that grow insensible.

If you disslke him it is at your own Peril; he is ssure to put in a Caveat beforehand againsst your Understanding; and, like a Malefac- tor in Wit, is always fursinssed with Exceptions against his Judges. This puts him upon perpe- tual Apologies, Excusses, and Defences, but ssstil by Way of Defiance, in a Kind of whif- fling Strain, without Regard of any Man, that sstands in the Way of his Pageant. Where he thinks he may do it ssafely, he will confidently own other Men's Writings; and where he fears the Truth may be disscovered, he will by feeble Denials and feigned Inssinua- tions give Men Occassion to ssupposse sso.

If he understands [i] Latin [i] or [i] Greek [i] he ranks himself among the Learned, despises the Ignorant, talks Criticisms out of [i] Scaliger[i], and repeats [i] Martial's [i] bawdy Epigrams, and sets up his Rest wholly upon Pedantry. But if he be not so well qualified, he cries down all Learning as pedantic, disclaims Study, and professes to write with as great Facility, as if his Muse was 110 A SMALL POET. sliding down [i]Parnassus[i]. Whatsoever he hears well said he seizes upon by poetical Licence; and one Way makes it his own, that is by ill repeating of it—This he believes to be no more Theft, than it is to take that, which others throw away. By this means his Writings are, like a Taylor's Cushion, of mosaic Work, made up of several Scraps sewed together, He calls a slovenly nasty Description [i] great Nature,[i] and dull Flatness [i] strange Easiness.[i] He writes down all that comes in his Head, and makes no Choice, because he has nothing to do it with, that is Judgment. He is always repealing the old Laws of Comedy, and like the [i] long Parliament [i] making [i] Ordinances [i] in their Stead; although they are perpetually [i] thrown out [i] of Coffee-Houses, and come to Nothing. He is like an [i]Italian [i] Thief, that never robs, but he murders, to prevent Discovery; so sure is he to cry down the Man from whom he purloins, that his petty Larceny of Wit may pass unsuspected. He is but a Copier at best, and will never arrive to practice by the Life: For bar him the Imitation of something he has read, and he has no Image in his Thoughts.

Observation and Fancy, the Matter and Form of just Wit, are above his Philosophy. He appears so over concerned in all Men's Wits, as if they were but Disparagements of his own; and cries down all they do, as if they were Encroachments upon him. He takes Jests from the Owners and breaks them, as [i] Justices[i] do false Weights, and Pots that want Measure. When he meets with any Thing, that is very good, he change it into small Money, like three Groats for a Shilling, to serve several Occasions. He disclaims Study, pretends to take Things in Motion, and to shoot flying, which appears to be very true by his often missing of his Mark. His Wit is much troubled with Obstructions; and he has Fits as painful as those of the Spleen. He fancies himself a dainty spruce Shepherd, with a Flock and a fine silken Shepherdess, that follows his Pipe, as Rats did the Conjurers in [i] Germany.[i]

As for [i] Epithets, [i] he always avoids those, that are near akin to the Senses. Such matches are unlawful, and not fit to be made by a [i] Christian[i] Poet; and therefore all his Care is to chuse out it was no better than bringing a Noble to Nine- pence. And as such Courses brough the [i] prodigal Son [i] to eat with Hogs: So they did him to feed with Horses, which were not much better Company, and may teach us to avoid doing the like. For certainly it is more noble to take four or five Grains of Sense, and, like a Gold-Beater, hammer them into s*o many Leaves as will fill a whole Book; than to write nothing but Epitomes, which many wife Men believe will be the Bane and Calamity of Learning.

When he writes, he commonly steers the Sense of his Lines by the Rhime that is at the End of them, as Butchers do Calves by the Tail. For when he has made one Line, which is easy enough; and has found out some sturdy hard Word, that will but rhyme, he will ham- mer the Sense upon it, like a Piece of hot Iron upon an Anvil, into what Form he pleas*es.

There is no Art in the World so rich in Terms as Poetry; a whole Dic_tionary is

Writer of [i] Virgil's[i] Life, who informs us that [Virgil] in his Youth studied Physic, in which having made great Proficiency, he repaired to [i] Rome, [i] and applying himself to that Branch of it able to contain them: For there is hardly a Pond, a Sheep-walk, or a Gravel-pit in all [i] Greece, [i] but the antient Name of it is become a Term of Art in Poetry. By this means *small Poets have such a Stock of able hard Words lying by them, as [i] Dryades, Hamadryades, Aonides, Fauni, Nymphae, Sylvani, &c.[i] that signify nothing at all; and such a World of pedantic Terms of the same Kind, as may serve to furnis^{h} all the new Inventions and [i] thorough-Reformations, [i] that can happen between this and [i] Plato's[i] great Year.

When he writes he never proposes any Scope or Purpose to himself, but gives h Genius all Freedom: For as he, that rides abroad for his Pleasure, can hardly be out of his Way; so he that writes for his Pleasure, can seldom be be- side his Subjec_t. It is an ungrateful Thing to a noble Wit to be confined to any Thing—To what Purpose did the Antients feign [i] Pegasus *to have Wings, if he must be confined to the Road and Stages like a Pack-Hors^{*e}, or be forced to be obedient to Hedges and Ditches? For [i] Metaphors, [i] he uses to chuse the hardest, and most far-fet that he can light upon—These are the Jewels of Eloquence, and therefore the harder they are, the more precious they must be.

He'll take scant Piece of coarse Sense, and stretch it on the Tenterhooks of half a score Rhimes, utnil it crack that you may see through it, and it rattle like a Drum-Head. When you see his Verses hanged up in Tobacco-Shops, you may say, in defiance of the Proverb, [i] that the weakest does not always go to the Wall; [i] for 'tis

[i] Like him that made Plaot, &c.] [i] Who this Blunder is to be fa- thered upon I cannot discover; but that which he imports to [i] Per- sius, [i] and another of Juvenal's Passage of his own in a Part of his Prose Collec_tions called [i] Criticisms upon Books and Autohrs, [i] will ex- plain—[i] Persius, [i] says, he well known the Lines are strong enough, and in that Sense may jus*_tly take the Wall of any, that have been written in our Language. He seldom makes a Conscience of his Rhimes; but will often take the Liberty to make [i] preach [i] rhyme with [i] Cheat, Vote [i] with [i] Rogue, and [i] Com- mittee-Man with Hang.

He'll make one Word of as many Joints, as the Tin-Pudding, that a Jugler pulls out of his Throat, and chops in again—What think you of [i] glud-fum-flam-hastaminantes? [i] Some of the old [i] Latin [i] Poets bragged that their Verses were tougher than Brass, and harder than Marble; what would they have done, if they had seen these? Verily they would have had more reason to wish thems*elves an hundred Throats, than they then had, to pronounce them.

There are some, that drive a Trade in writ- ing in praise of other Writers, (like Rooks, 118 A SMALL POET. that bet on Gamesters Hands) not at all to ce- lebrate the learned Author's Merits, as they would shew, but their own Wits, of which he is but the Subjec_t. The Letchery of this Va- nity has spawned more Writers than the [i] civil Law: [i] For those, whose Modesty must notorious Va- pours imaginable. For if the Privilege of Love be allowed—[i] Dicere quae pudit, scribere jussit Amor, [i] why should it not be so in Self- Love too? For if it be Wisdom to conceal our Imperfec_tions, what is it to discover our Vir- tues? It is not like, that [i] Nature [i] gave Men great Parts upon such Terms, as the [i] Fairies [i] use to give Money, to pinch and leave them if they speak of it. They say—[i] Praise is but the Shadow of Virtue; [i] and s*ure that Virtue is very foolish, that is afraid of its own Shadow.

There was one, that lined a Hat-Case with a Paper of [i] Benlowse's Poetry—[i] Prynne [i] bought it by Chance, and put a new Demi-Castor into it. The first Time he wore it he felt only a singing in his Head, which within two Days turned to a Vertigo—He was let Blood in the Ear by one of the State-Physicians, and recovered; but before he went abroad he writ a Poem of Rocks and Seas, in a Style so proper and natural, that it was hard to determine, which was rugged.

There is no Fear of Activity, nor Gambol of Wit, that ever was performed by Man, from him that vaults on [i] Pegasus, [i] to him that tumbles through the Hoop of an Anagram, but [i] Benlows [i] has got the Mastery in it, whether it be high-rope Wit, or low-rope Wit. He [two rules]/ / #A RANTER/ / / I²s a Fanatic Hector, that has found out by a very ftrange Way of new Light, how to transform all the Devils into Angels of Light ; for he believes all Religion confits in Loofenefs, and that Sin and Vice is the whole Duty of Man. He puts off the old Man, but puts it on again upon the new one, and makes his Pagan Vices serve to preserve his Chriftian Virtues from wearing out ; for if he fhould use his Piety and Devotion al- ways it would hold out but a little while. He is loth that Iniquity and Vice fhould be thrown away, as long as there may be good Ufe of it ; for if that, which is wickedly gotten, may be difposed to pious Ufes, why fhould not Wickednefs itfelf as well? He believes himfelf Shot-free againft all the Attempts of the Devil, the World, and the Flesh, and therefore is not afraid to attack them in their own Quarters, and encounter them at their own Weapons.

For as ftrong Bodies may freely venture to do,/ and fuffer that, without any Hurt to them-/ felves, which would deftroy thofe that are/ feeble: So a Saint, that is ftrong in Grace,/ may boldly engage himfelf in thofe great Sins/ and Iniquities, that would eafily damn a weak/ Brother, and yet come off never the worfe./ He believes Deeds of Darknefs to be only thofe/ Sins that are committed in private, not thofe/ that are acted openly and owned. If he have Hope of Preferment/ he makes all the Law run on the King's Side ;/ if not, it always takes part against him ; for as/ he was bred to make any Thing right or wrong/ between Man and Man, so he can do between/ the King and his Subjects. Pounds, is bound by the Charter to ferve the Public with fo much Underftanding, what fhift foever he make to raife it, and wear a Chain about his Neck like a Raindeer, or in Default to commute, and make Satisfaction in ready Money, the beft Reafon of the Place; for which hi has the Name only, like a titular Prince, and is an Alderman extraordinary. But if his Wife can prevail with him to stand, he becomes one of the City-supporters, and, like the Unicorn in the King's Arms, wears a Chain about his Neck very right-worshipfully. He wears Scarlet, as the Whore of Babylon does, not for her honesty, but the Rank and Quality he is of among the Wicked, When he fits as a Judge in his Court he is absolute, and uses arbitrary Power ; for he is not bound to understand what he does, nor render an Account why he gives Judgment on one Side rather than another ; but his Will is sufficient to stand for his Reason, to all Intents and Purposes. He does no public Business without eating and drinking, and never meets about Matters of Importance, but the cramming his Inside is the most weighty Part of the Work of the Day. He dispatches no public Affair until he has thoroughly dined upon it, and is fully satisfied with Quince-Pye and Custard : for Men are wiser, the Italians say, after their Bellies are full, than when they are fasting, and he is very cautious to omit no Occasion of improving his Parts that Way. He is so careful of the Interest of his Belly, and manages it so industriously, that in a little Space it grows great and takes Place of all the rest of his Members, and becomes so powerful, that they will never be in a Condition to rebel against it any more. He is clothed in Scarlet the Livery of his Sins, like the rich Glutton, to put him in Mind of what Means he came to his Wealth and Preferment by. He makes a Trade of his Eating, and, like a Cock, scrapes when he feeds ; for the Public pays for all and more, which he and his Brethren share among themselves ; for they never make a dry Reckoning. When he comes to be Lord-Mayor he does not keep a great Houfe, but a very great Houfe-warming for a whole Year ; for though he invites all the Companies in the City he does not treat them, but they club to entertain him, and pay the Reckoning beforehand. His Fur-gown makes him look a great deal bigger than he is, like the Feathers of an Owl, and when he pulls it off, he looks as if he were fallen away, or like a Rabbet, had his Skin pulled off.

A LOVER

I²S a Kind of Goth and Vandal, that leaves his native Self to fettle in another, or a Planter that forfakes his Country, where he was born, to labour and dig in Virginia. His Heart is caught in a Net with a Pair of bringht fhining Eyes, as Larks are with Pieces of a looking-Glafs. He makes heavy Com__plaints againft it for deferting of him, and defires to have another in Exchange for it, which is a very unreafonable Requeft ; for if it betrayed its bofom Friend, what will it do to a Stranger, that fhould give it Truft and Entertainment ? He binds himself, and cries out he is robbed of his Heart, and charges the Innocent with it, only to get a good Com__pofition, or another for it, againft Con__fciences and Honefty. He talks much of his

Flame, and pretends to be burnt by his Mif__trefs's Eyes, for which he requires Satisfaction from her, like one that fets his Houfe on Fire to get a Brief for charitable Contributions.

 He makes his Miftrefs all of Stars, and when ſhe is unkind, rails at them, as if they did ill Offices between them, and being of her Kin ſet her againſt him. He falls in Love as Men fall ſick when their Bodies are inclined to it, and imputes that to his Miſtreſſes Charms, which is really in his own Temper ; for when that is altered, the other vaniſhes of it ſelf, and therefore one ſaid not amiſs, is but a Clap of the Mind, a Kind of running of the Fancy, that breaks out, if it be not ſtopped in Time, into Botches of heroic Rime ; for all Lovers are poets for the Time being, and make their Ladies a Kind of mo-together by a ſtrong Fancy, but very ſtiff and unnatural ; and though they ſteal Stars from Heaven, as Prometheus did Fire, to animate

[double rule]

A BANKRUPT

I²S made by breaking, as a Bird is hatched by breaking the Shell, for he gains more by giving over his Trade, than ever he did by dealing in it. He drives a Trade, as Oliver Cromwel did a Coach, till it broke in Pieces. He is very tender and careful in preserving his Credit, and keeps it as methodically as a Race-nag is dieted, that in the End he may run away with it: for he observes a punctual Curiosity in performing his Word, until he has improved his Credit as far as it can go ; and then he has caught the Fish, and throws away the Net ; as a Butcher, when he has fed his Beast as fat as it can grow, cuts the Throat of it. When he has brought his Design to Perfection, and disposed of all his Materials, he lays his Train, like a Powder Traytor, and gets out of the way, while he blows up all those that trusted him. After the Blow is given there is no Manner of Intelligence to be had of him for some Months, until the Rage and Fury is somewhat digested, and all Hopes vanished of ever recovering any Thing of Body, or Goods, for Revenge, or Restitution ; and then Propositions of Treaty and Accommodation appear, like the Sign of the Hand and Pen out of the Clouds, with Conditions more unreasonable than Thieves are wont to demand for Restitution of stolen Goods. He shoots like a Fowler at a whole Flock of Geese at once, and stalks with his Horse to come as near as possibly he can without being perceived by any one, or giving the least Suspicion of his Design, until it is too late to prevent it ; and then he flies from them, as they should have done before from him. His Way is so commonly used in the City, that he robs in a Road, like a Highwayman, and yet they will never arrive at Wit enough to avoid it ; for it is done upon Surprife ; and as Thieves are commonly better mounted than thofe they rob, he very eafily makes his Efcape, and flies beyond Perfuif of Huon-cries, and there is no Poffibility of overtaking him.

A RIBALD

I²S the Devil's Hypocrite, the endeavours to make himfelf appear worfe than he is. His evil Words and bad Manners ftrive which fhall moft corrupt one another, and it is hard to fay which has the Advantage. He vents his Lechery at the Mouth, as fome Fifhes are faid to engender. He is an unclean Beaft that chews the Cud ; for after he has fatisfied his Lust, he brings it up again into his Mouth to a fecond Enjoyment, and plays an After-game of Letchery with his Tongue much worfe than that which the Cunnilingi ufed among the old Romans. He ftrips Nature ftark-naked, and clothes her in the moft fantaftic and ridiculous Fafhion a wild Imagination can invent. He is worfe and more nafty than a Dog ; for in his broad Defcriptions of others obfcene Actions he does but lick up the Vomit of another Man's Surfeits. He tells Tales out of a vaulting School. A leud bawdy Tale does more Hurt, and gives a worfe Example than the Thing of which it was told ; for the Act extends but to a few, and if it be concealed goes no further ; but the Report of it is unlimited, and may be conveyed to all People, and all Times to come. He expofes that with his Tongue, which Nature gave Women Modesty, and brute Beasts Tails to cover. He mistakes Ribaldry for Wit, though nothing is more unlike, and believes himself to be the finer Man the filthier he talks ; as if he were above Civility, as Fanatics are above Ordinances, and held nothing more shameful than to be ashamed of any Thing. He talks nothing but Aretine's Pictures, as plain as the Scotch Dialect, which is esteemed to be the most copious and elegant of the Kind. He improves and husbands his Sins to the best Advantage, and makes one Vice find Employment for another ; for what he acts loosely in private, he talks as loosely of in public, and finds as much Pleasure in the one as the other. He endeavours to make himself Satisfaction for the Pangs his Claps and Botches put him to with vapouring and bragging how he came by them. He endeavours to purchase himself a Reputation by pretending to that which the best Men abominate, and the worst value not, like one that clips and waxes false Coin, and ventures his Neck for that which will yield him nothing.
