AN ANTIQUARY

I²s one that has his Being in this Age, but his Life and Converfation is in the Days of old. He defpifes the prefent Age as an Innovation, and flights the future ; but has a great Value for that, which is paf and gone, like the Madman, that fell in Love with Cleopatra. He is an old frippery-Philofopher, that has fo ftrange a natural Affection to worm-eaten Speculation, that it is apparent he has a Worm in his Skull. He honours his Forefathers and Fore-mothers, but condemns his Parents as too modern, and no better than Upftarts. He neglects himfelf, becaufe he was born in his own Time, and fo far off Antiquity, which he fo much admires ; and repines, like a younger Brother, becaufe he came fo late into the World. He fpends the one half of his Time in collecting old insignificant Trifles, and the other in fhewing them, which he takes fingular Delight in ; becaufe the oftener he does it, the further they are from being new to him. All his Curiofities take place of one another according to their Seniority, and he values them not by their Abilities, but their Standing. He has a great Veneration for Words that are ftricken in Years, and are grown fo aged, that they have out-lived their Employments—Thefe he ufes with a Refpect agreeable to their Antiquity, and the good Services they have done. He throws away his Time in enquiring after that which is paf and gone fo many Ages fince, like one that fhoots away an Arrow, to find out another that was loft before. He fetches things out of Duft and Ruins, like the Fable of the chymical Plant raifed out of its own Afhes. He values one old Invention, that is loft and never to be recovered, before all the new ones in the World, tho' never fo ufe-ful. The whole Buſinefs of his Life is the fame with his, that flows the Tombs at Westminster, only the one does it for his Pleaſure, and the other for Money. As every Man has but one Father, but two Grand-Fathers and a World of Anceftors ; fo he has a proportional Value for Things that are antient, and the further off the greater.

He is a great Time-ferver, but it is of Time out of Mind, to which he conforms exactly, but is wholly retied from the preſent. His Days were ſpent and gone long before he came into the World, and ſince his only Buſinefs is to collect what he can out of the Ruins of them. He has fo ſtrong a natural Affection to any Thing that is old, that he may truly ſay to Duft and Worms you are my Father, and to Rot-tennefs thou are my Mother. He has no Providence nor Fore-ſight ; for all his Contem-plate-tions look backward upon the Days of old, and his Brains are turned with them, as if he walked backwards. He had rather interpret one obſcure Word in any old ſenſeleſs Dif- courſe, than be the Author of the moſt ingenious new one ; and with Scaliger would fell the Empire of Germany^[1] (if it were in his Power) for an old Song. He devours an old Manu- ſcript with greater Reliſh than Worms and Moths do, and, though there be nothing in it, values it above any Thing printed, which he accounts but a Novelty. When he happens to cure a ſmall Botch in an old Author, he is as proud of it, as if he had got the Philofophers Stone, and could cure all the Difeafes of Mankind.

He values things wrongfully upon their Antiquity, forgetting that the moft modern are really the moft ancient of all Things in the World, like thofe that reckon their Pounds before their Shillings and Pence, of which they are made up. He efteems no Cuftoms but fuch as have outlived themfelves, and are long fince out of Ufe ; as the Catholics allow of no Saints, but fuch as are dead, and the Fanatics, Op-pofition, of none but the Living.
